

Thompson Hine Grows Environmental Practice

Elizabeth B. Davis Joins Atlanta Office

ATLANTA--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- Elizabeth B. Davis has joined the law firm Thompson Hine LLP as a partner in the Atlanta office. Davis, a member of the firm's Environmental practice group, was formerly with Epstein Becker & Green, P.C.

Davis focuses her practice on regulatory compliance, permitting, enforcement defense and litigation. She also handles the environmental aspects of corporate and real estate transactions. She has extensive experience with counseling and litigation in all aspects of federal and state laws related to hazardous waste, underground storage tanks, water, air and occupational safety and health. In addition, Davis regularly counsels clients regarding compliance with consumer product safety requirements, including designing and managing recalls of consumer products and defending related product liability claims.

Earlier in her career, Davis was assistant regional counsel with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Region IV, and was also with Womble Carlyle Sandridge & Rice, PLLC, where she served as leader of the Environmental practice group for the firm's Atlanta office. She is involved in the activities of the Georgia State Bar's Environmental and Real Property Law sections, and is a member of the Environmental Law Institute.

"We're excited to have Beth join our practice," says Andrew Kolesar, chair of Thompson Hine's Environmental practice group. "Her experience and background will strengthen our ability to serve our clients on a wide variety of environmental matters in the Southeast and beyond."

"Beth adds to the breadth of experience and capability we have in our office. She will fill an important role in our commitment to client service and brings a full complement of highly refined skills," says Walt Linscott, partner-in-charge of the firm's Atlanta office. "We're very pleased to have her on board."

Davis earned her J.D. from the University of Georgia School of Law and her B.A. from Agnes Scott College.
